Exceptional Enterprise Program

Becoming an Exceptional Enterprise is a proven process to higher-functioning and higher profits.

A business that can successfully manage the unforgiving challenges of start-up to early growth and expansion and market maturity is genuinely exceptional. That's because 95% of companies struggle in this trajectory, and about 70% fail. Survival is a daily battle for those who remain, and "sustainability" is not in the vocabulary.

The 5% that soar – exceptional - have gained knowledge, insights, and a practical tool-set to understand and approach their business challenges differently from their competitors. What is critical to understand is that this is not intuitive for businesses or their leadership. Essentially stated: Leaders are too close to their vested interest and don't know the growth rules.

Program Components: Diagnose – Prescribe – Predict

The Exceptional Enterprise Program uses proprietary algorithms based on the 1,300 company research of James Fischer to diagnose the critical enterprise root causes which create drag on company productivity, profitability, and growth. The report highlights organizational and leadership insights for business owners, consideration concerning stage-appropriate completeness, Non-Negotiable Rules (NNRs), and foundational business elements. The element packages consist of videos, principles, tools, and two-hour interactive training meetings. Each business element meeting has between four to ten two-hour sessions. Participation is for key personal, and fees are fixed based on the business element complexity, knowledge, and skills transfer. The immediate result is to transfer Working ON the business knowledge and skills to key personal. By design, the material is repeatable, trainable, and scalable.

Approach to Success

The classic Seven Stages of Growth methodology is a starting point for becoming an Exceptional Enterprise. The key is to understand that as you add people, you add complexity, which requires adjustments to problem-solving. Complexity also drives the need to continually focus on the root cause of problems and a holistic approach to communication to align the entire organization (i.e., its people).

A refinement of the method – called ReWilding® - provides a more comprehensive framework for performance improvement by integrating techniques to diagnose, prescribe, and predict the key elements in a business's ecosystem that are the "missing elements" to providing tangible, lasting solutions to the issues identified.

One of the most unique and dynamic business growth models I've ever encountered. Their proprietary Stages of Growth Matrix encapsulates a company's life cycle, not by revenue but by employee size."

B. Gravelly, Growth10Thinking

"Growth is a focus of my overall business philosophy, and that is why I have appreciated the Stages of Growth methodology for several years. Rather than just solving the immediate issues a business owner faces, it focuses on the root causes of barriers to growth."

R. Laurie, Integ Solutions

"The benefits greatly outweigh the cost. The investment I've made has paid itself back in two months, and we haven't even scratched the surface yet."

P DeFinis, TechForward IT

"What surprised me the most is how much deeper we dive into the actual business and improving my business. It's not just theories."

CEO

"This comprehensive program helps me and my team effectively use our critical thinking skills to focus ON the business instead of only working IN the business"
